About SUNY & SUNY Korea

Founded in 1948, the State University of New York is widely known as the most extensive public higher education system in the United States, consisting of 64 universities, including Stony Brook University and the Fashion Institute of Technology. In the SUNY system, 1.3 million students receive quality educational services in 600,000 credit-bearing programs and 700,000 lifelong education and community service opportunities. It is undoubtedly the largest and the best public university system in the United States by any measure.

SUNY Korea was founded in 2012 as a part of the Ministry of Education's decision to serve the transnational needs for quality and global education. Initially launched with the graduate programs of Stony Brook University's Technology & Society and Computer Science Departments, it has grown to provide five degree programs of Stony Brook University and two flagship programs of Fashion Institute of Technology, educating more than a thousand future talents from 35 different countries.

Specialization in cutting-edge academic areas, or STEAM, that will lead future technological innovations and value creation
